THE DAMOSEL OF ONE DIMENSION.

Let others celebrate the charms

Of ladies fair, with figures ample, Of whom the Medicean is The Venus serving for example; I string my lyre in praise of one Who makes no volgar, vain pretension To fascination through the flesh, The damosel of one dimension.

The plump, though pretty, new appear But coarse beside her girlish slimness, Whose rare attenuation shows

No trace of glastliness or grimness; Although 'tis true she'd ne'er suggest The type you might call tuttl fruiti, Her slender form today, messens, Describes the lauded line of beauty,

I, looking on her levely length, Abandon with amusing quickness Revolting seem both breadth and thickness; How Turks delight to feast their eyes On fat doth pass my comprehension;

The damosel of one dimension.

Her one dimension is enough; The line that emulates the willow's Own supple grace is better worth Than fattened firsh that rolls and billows. But does my lady know her charm? Alas, I'm filled with apprehension ly damosel of one dimension.

Lest antilean transform and spoil

-- Mary Norton Bradford in Boston Globe.

TURNED THE TABLES.

The Surprise Was For She Who Had Planned to Surprise.

That surprises do not always surprise those for whom they are intended is one of the peculiar things about surprises, and this fact was well illustrated one day this week in an east end house. The lady of the house received word from a friend that she was coming out the next day for lunch. Now, it happened that the next day was the day on which the servant girl had her day off, and the lady of the house made up her mind that she would surprise her friend by getting up a nice lunch prepared by herself, for she had the reputation when they were young ladies of not being able to cook, while her friend had the reputation of being an excellent cook.

The day her friend was expected the lady went to market and laid in a supply of all the good things which go to make up a fine lunch. She went home and lighted the fire and prepared for the cooking. Just then she discovered that she had forgotten to get some fruit and told her young daughter to tell her friend when the latter came that she would be back in a few moments. She went to the store and, meeting some of her friends, staid quite awhile, forgetting how time was flying.

In the meantime the friend arrived, and, being told that her hostess would soon be home, she went into the kitchen, and, seeing the good things there, she went to work and cooked and prepared the lunch. When the lady of the house arrived home, she was astonished to see the table set and a most appetizing lunch on the table. The surprise she had intended for her friend was a surprise for her. - Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Warned by Those About to Die. Camille Flammarion, in a French periodical, asked people to answer the following question: "Have you ever had while awake the impression of having seen a human being and had that impression coincide with the time of the death of that person?" The astronomer tells the result of his investigation in the Nouvelle Revue.

He had 4,280 responses, of which 2,456 were negative and 1,814 affirmative. Of the affirmative replies he examined 782, who recited 1,120 cases, all of which he regards as authentic. In his article M. Flammarion merely gives the experience of the subjects as related to him and does not attempt to account for the premonitions.

It might be said, however, that the fact that 40 per cent of those who wrote to him had had telepathic experiences does not indicate such an average among the human family. The three periodicals whose readers he asked for information have a large circulation, and it is safe to say that every reader who has had premonitions of the death of a friend wrote to Flammarion, while the others would not regard it as worth while.
